CLCV 203 Ancient Philosophy
11:00 – 12:20 TR
K. Sanders
Introduction to ancient philosophy, concentrating on Plato and Aristotle, dealing with such topics as metaphysics, ethics, and the theory of knowledge.
In this course we will examine the life of Alexander the Great and the ancient Mediterranean world in which he lived. We will also look at the impact he had on the historical development of that world after his death, the political use of his legacy from antiquity to the 21st century, and the fascination he continues to inspire. In addition to mastering the basic facts of Alexander's life, you will be asked to investigate where those facts come from, how and why they have been manipulated over time, and how all of this affects your understanding of the study of history in general.
